

JAILER FOILED MOB.

EFFORT TO LYNCH A NEGRO IN ILLINOIS FAILED.

Informed Mob They Would Enter the Jail at Their Peril—Fearing That a Race Riot May Be Precipitated.

A mob of fifty masked men went to the jail in Shawanese, Ill., early Tuesday morning and demanded that Jailer Galloway turn over to them John Griffin, colored, who was under arrest for an attempted assault upon a white woman.

When the mob demanded that Jailer Galloway turn the negro over to them Galloway armed himself, and, after remaining with the mob from the jail door, he warned them that any effort to force the jail would be at their own peril. The mob, to spite of the jailer's words, made several ineffectual attempts to break down the jail doors, finally dispersing about daylight.

Many of the colored people are taking sides with Griffin, though some of them have, in fear of a race riot, left the town.

CRIME IN COLORADO.

Two Men Assaulted at Victor by Unknown Persons.

A special from Victor, Colo., says two men were assaulted and seriously injured, one probably fatally, Tuesday, as a result, it is believed, of the present strike of the miners of the district. The first assault occurred at Anacosta, the victim being John Hawk.

His assailants are unknown, but he believes the assault was connected with the trial some days ago of two guards at the El Paso mine, charged with carrying concealed weapons. One of them was fined $10 and the other was released.

The second outrage happened late at night. Thomas M. Stewart, a carpenter, employed in the construction of a high fence around the Golden Cycle property, was taken from his home at Independence, terribly beaten and shot through the body. He will probably die. The assailants were five in number. Some of them wore masks, but the victim claims to have recognized those who were not masked.

The police readily accommodated him. Laine explained that he married his first wife, a girl of 18, last November. Later he met one of 20 and also wedded her. Recently the two wives discovered Laine's duplicity and went into court together, where they procured warrants.

The news comes from San Juan P. R., that Jose Marrero, a non-leprosy patient who was liberated from the leper colony as a result of the recent investigation, died on Monday of heart disease, superinduced by joy at his release. POULTRY

The Way to Success. From Farmers' Review: The lesson the world's most eminent and successful men have taught us most forcibly is the importance of enthusiastic effort. The accomplishment of any given object in life is based largely upon how intensely we are taken up with its importance. Our hearts must be in our avocation. He who wills to do with his whole heart, conquers or dies in the attempt. Too much of what the world has seen fit to designate as pastimes or pleasures enters into our everyday existence. Its presence can be traced to every man's daily activities. Each successive duty we perform has its degree of earnestness or indifference. The poultryman who takes the details of his business to heart with him at night and arises with it in mind is not disappointed in his association. Enthusiasm conquers all problems and perplexities and knows no failures. It finds a way or makes one. Ignorance, false theories, mistakes, all are but stepping stones to success to him who wills with enthusiastic zeal.

When the trader of prize fowls gets determined, intelligent and enthusiastic, he correctly proportioned into his mating, handling, advertising and exhibiting, something always happens. What happens is success. Where one fails another is successful. Out of the same soil wheat and tares are produced, from the same family, perhaps, the successful business man and the pauper, the reformer and the drunkard. One presses forward to a definite aim in life with enthusiastic zeal, the other drifts aimlessly here and there on the waves of circumstances. As our lot in life is what we choose to make it, so surely will our poultry operations prove successful or failures in proportion to the amount of earnest zeal and energy there is in evidence. It is from a fancier's point of view that I speak, and a few things I consider of vital importance. You must procure the very best of stock, and select for advertising mediums papers of known large circulation. Make your advertisements clear and concise. Be sure your lists contain continuing facts. When you have received an inquiry for stock or eggs, summon all the common sense, good judgment, business ability and tact at your command. You will need them all to properly handle the inquiry. Right here is one of the most decisive points in success or failure. Always use good printed stationery. A catalogue or good circular is a help and saves an immense amount of writing. A good show record is a very great help. All who are endowed with a reasonable amount of common sense and have a liking for the poultry business, and will press forward with enthusiasm and give it their time and attention, will find that success will crown their efforts.—Elmer Gimlin, Christian County, Illinois.

Dust Baths.

We hope our readers will not forget that there are only certain times in the year when dust may be had from the well-traveled highway. During most of the year the road is either frozen or muddy or in the process of drying, at which time it is not possible to get dust suitable for the use of the fowls. A few barrels of dust at this time of year will serve to keep the fowls free from body lice all the rest of the time. It will require a little effort to make this collection now, but it will save much work later on dusting the fowls one by one with sulphur compounds or insect powders. This hard work should be avoided as much as possible. Give the fowls a good dust bath and they will take care of the lice question.

It may be necessary to go some distance to get the dust desired unless the road in front of the farm house is well traveled. The dust bath should be arranged in a good-sized box and placed in the pen in a place where the sun will strike it and keep it dry. The hens like to lie in dust themselves in the sun, especially in winter. During the summer months a dust bath may be made out of coarsely run poultry house, but should be protected from above by some kind of a protection against rain. Otherwise a sudden shower may turn the whole thing into mud and it will be several days in drying out.

The greatest difficulty we have with dust is the fact that it is inclined to stick to the fowls on the edge of the box at night. If a cover is put over it, they try to roost on the cover, but this can be avoided by hanging the cover to the wall and having it drop over the box in a slanting manner. The fowls will then find it impossible to stick on the cover, much as they may desire to do so. We have had hens make the dust bath their laying place, and this is always annoying. We have no panacea for this evil, but it does not always occur. Where it does, and becomes serious, the poultry keeper will have just grounds for experimentation.

We select like the experience of our readers on the question of dust boxes and dust baths. What have they found the most serviceable arrangement of the box and what has been their experience with the objectionable features? Also how many farmers provide their fowls with any dust bath at all in winter?

The first importations of Dutch Belted cattle into this country were made in 1858. Importations have not been made, as the Dutch owners generally refuse to part with these cattle.

The police believe the man was either partially intoxicated or mentally unbalanced, and are inclined to doubt his story.
